LGBTQIA+

L-Lesbian, G-Gay, B-Bisexual, T-Transgender, Q-Queer, I-intersex, A-asexual, +for any and all other identities. This is an acronym that encompasses people with differing sexual and gender identities. It is an ever-evolving term and different versions are used by different people.

June was Pride Month, so we interviewed a member of our community about their experience as a gay man living in Aizu. We are keeping this article anonymous, but we hope that it gives you a different perspective on the world.

Being open to and learning about different cultures, the lives of others, and their experiences is also Cultural and International Exchange!

Love is Love! Acceptance is for Everyone!

1. How is life in Aizu? (From an LGBTQIA+ perspective)

Life in Aizu is comfortable and I feel safe. However, as a gay person, it gets lonely sometimes because there isn't a solid community of LGBTQIA members in Aizu. Being a gay person in Aizu can be a little challenging. Most people are kind but some do not know what "gay" is and therefore act weird once they find out that I am gay. When I meet new people with my boyfriend, they immediately refer to us as "best friends" and we do not correct them. They could be homophobic or ignorant and it could put us in an unsafe situation, therefore we agree. In public, we are just "friends," but in the comfort of our apartment, we are a "couple" that has been together for 4 years and plans to wed soon. At times, it can feel oppressing because I know that gay people in Japan do not have the same rights as straight people. We live in a country where gay people cannot get married or adopt children, and it makes me sad for gay Japanese people. Luckily, I can return to my home country and marry, but not everyone has that privilege.

2. Do you have any problems or difficulties when you came to Japan? (Especially regarding LGBTQIA+)

Of course, I experienced some culture shock when I first arrived. As a gay man, I found it difficult to accept how little people knew about the LGBTQIA+ community. I also had to get used to people assuming that I had a girlfriend. Back home, I was open and proud. But in Japan, I try to blend in and assimilate to cultural standards.

3. Did you tell anyone around you about your sexuality? If not, was there any reason why you did not?

Of course, I told my family. My mother was supportive and loving, while my father was not. My father and I have not talked about it for over 4 years, and he told me that he would "never accept having a gay son." I did not tell my grandfathers because they are very religious and homophobic. One of my grandfathers passed away last year and he died not knowing that I was gay. It is sad but I think it was the best decision at the time. I believe that "coming out" is a sacred and vulnerable thing, and if telling someone who is not supportive would do more harm than good, then do not tell them. You do not have to come out to anyone, it is your choice who gets to know the real authentic you.

4. Have you ever had any troubles with your sexuality in your life?

Yes! I grew up in a strict Christian household with many family members being leaders in the church. Being gay was not allowed and I was told at a young age that gay people were going to hell. I remember growing up in the church and listening to homophobic sermons. This caused me to be anxious and depressed and I thought I would die as a closeted man. When COVID hit, I had the time to reflect on my life and who I was, and I felt that it was time for me to come out. I came out slowly, first to my sisters, then my mom, and finally my dad and stepmother. I remember my stepmother told me that I would die from AIDs and my father told me that I would never be happy. These words hurt me at the time, and they still sting a little. But, I know that their ignorance and hatred do not stop me from living my life. I have the support I need from my chosen family and I am proud of who I am.

5. Do you have any dreams for the future?

Yes! I want to travel and enjoy life with my beautiful boyfriend (hopefully husband one day) with our two cats. I want to meet interesting people and make genuine connections. I work with an NGO in Brazil right now focusing on providing food to vulnerable communities through food recovery projects and I want to continue my work with them, and I intend to visit Brazil soon to see this work in action.

6. Is there anything you want Japanese people to understand or realize?

I want people to realize that gay people exist and have been around since the beginning. Being gay or not straight is natural and not a choice. It is a part of someone's identity and should be respected. To any gay Japanese people reading this, I want you to know that coming out is a process, and do not feel pressured to come out if you are not in a safe environment. There is no right way to come out. Come out at your own pace and on your terms. Whenever you do come out, please know that there are people all over the world who understand your journey and love you. If your family is not supportive, make a "chosen family." My chosen family has gotten me through some dark times. Love is love, and there is nothing wrong with you. And to the allies reading this, please know that your love and acceptance can change lives. If you are an ally, be proud of it.

7. Is there anything you would like to tell the people who read the newsletter?

I want people to know that being nice and listening to someone could save a life. Be open-minded. Listen to each other's stories. Always be kind. Also, if you have never been to a PRIDE event, I recommend it. It is a time of love, acceptance, dancing, and happiness.
